Dear Mr. Murphy:

As a former Fox Valley resident that truly understands the lore of what football means to the good people of Wisconsin, we are prepared to help alleviate the public relations fiasco that is now plaguing your organization.

Our team is a Minor League Baseball team located in north Alabama and our staff, because of our affiliation with the Milwaukee Brewers, completely sympathizes with the distraction you now face. That a player can wreak this much havoc on a storied organization such as the Packers is almost too much to watch.

Therefore, we are willing to make the following trade offer for the services of Brett Favre:

- Two (2) college interns
- One (1) college intern TBNL taken in our draft at Baseball Winter Meetings in December in Las Vegas
- One (1) Matt LaPorta game-worn jersey. Matt was our rightfielder here in Huntsville until being traded - along with three other Minor League Baseball players - by Milwaukee to the Cleveland Indians for star pitcher CC Sabathia. The jersey can be used as a symbol to display at Lambeau Field to show that both Wisconsin teams upgraded their rosters in the same season by utilizing a small, token piece of the same player.
- The Stars will provide the salary and benefits for the interns for one calendar or fiscal year, providing the Packers assume responsibility of Favre's salary for a like period of time.
- We would, of course, ensure that Favre would never be traded directly to an NFC North team.

This trade would allow the media circus to disband and allow you and your staff to refocus on the upcoming football season.

Please let us know if you'd like to discuss this offer.

Best wishes in 2008!
